Following extensive formal training at Central Saint Martins in performance design, I worked for six years at the renowned Angels the Costumiers in London, becoming freelance in 2005. Over the years I have built up an extensive knowledge of dress through the ages. The scale of the projects I have been involved with ranges from the smallest short film to the biggest of US blockbusters and I have worked internationally. What excites me most about my work is how to reflect the psychology of character and how the smallest detail can make the hugest difference. Whether that be the right pair of 1960s Italian sunglasses or the perfect weight of overcoat cloth to obtain that dramatic flap in a gust of wind.
